Keeper of the Spirit of People

Stop, take a breath and appreciate what we do was the message presented by our own Storey Wilkens. Storey certainly uses her heart as her main tool. Although she was humble and self-deprecating about her obvious artistic and technical abilities, she has mastered her story telling journalistic-editorial style. Picture shows including her family, children and grandmother were framed in an emotional down to earth context. She is certainly “the keeper of the spirit” of her family and her clients.

Photography is a still medium and needs a sense of movement. By shooting people in motion she avoids static, uncomfortable poses. Natural light and natural looking light give her work a sense of depth. Half of her wedding clients this year have come from outside of Canada. They are getting married in Toronto and they rely on event planners, which refer Storey. Many of her portrait clients are contacts made through photographing her daughter’s daycare. Most of her clients are working professionals, confident about whom they are, who want to be found and revealed.
